

The Dollar-Table Hammer (Stories from East Pickerel Corners Book 1)

This book tells the story of what life in a 200 year old house in the central region of New Hampshire was like. Humorous and inspirational stories of discovering how the lives of the earliest American settlers were lived through attempts to repair and restore a small structure that has been continuously occupied since the time prior to the Revolutionary War. The seasons were harsh, the house was old but solid and living in it was not at all easy. It taught the last family to live in it many lessons and made them all better people in the end. In the end we raised 6 children in this house. Two went on to become Doctors, one became an Architect, one became a Christian Faith Pastor, one is a chemical engineer and we are still working on the last one. The books narrator is the family father who tells the stories with a strong dose of humorous irony and the unique local flavor of a new Northern New Englander.
